The first aid course will be hosted by Audrey Campbell RN DipVN GCLT who lectures at the polytechnic's School of Veterinary Nursing in Dunedin.

The course is designed to give dog owners and handlers basic skills to be able to act in life-threatening situations before veterinary treatment can be accessed. There are a variety of circumstances where first aid can save lives - the dog that gets hit by a car or is seriously injured in a car accident, hunting expedition or while out for a walk. However, it is stressed that what is taught in the course is only a first aid measure - what can be done for an injured animal until you can get to a vet.

Participants will learn how to assess critical signals such as pulse rates and gum colour and how to perform CPR.

If you wish to attend the class, please fill in the attached form. Numbers are limited and are on a first come, first served basis.
